COURT CHARGES ATTEMPT MADE TO INFLUENCE JURORS

Judge T. N. Haas, at Harrisonburg, Makes Allegation During Damage Suit Trial.

HARRISONBURG, VA., May 14.—Judge T. N. Haas sprang a sensation in Circuit Court yesterday morning, when he announced that jurors in the $10,000 damage suit of P. A. Shifflet against Sol J. Hensley had been approached outside of court by someone interested in influencing the verdict. A juror told him that at least two of the twelve men were thus approached. Judge Haas stated that he had not inquired as to the identity of the guilty party, and did not desire at this time to know who it was. When the trial is concluded, however, he said he would make a thorough investigation and see that the guilty party is brought to justice. The jurors were instructed not to allow the incident to influence their verdict in the case. This is the third trial of the damage suit, the jurors being unable to agree at the conclusion of each of the former trials. Shifflet alleges that his daughter, Polly, was debauched by Hensley, a prosperous farmer, and once a candidate for sheriff of Rockingham County. The charges are emphatically denied by Hensley.

Polly Shifflet, whose baby also was present in court, concluded her testimony yesterday morning. The defense began the introduction of evidence in the afternoon, and the trial will be concluded tomorrow.

The chief creditors of Amott are the Cohen Company for $200, and Miller & Rhoads for $250.
